Description

Oil on canvas, signed "Thibaut de Reimpré" in the lower right corner and dated 1994. In excellent condition. Dimensions: 65 x 54 cm. Thibaut de Reimpré studied at the École des Beaux-Arts in Paris, specifically in the Yankel studio from 1968 to 1971. He works primarily in acrylic paint (though he has also used India ink) in an abstract style. He belongs to the second generation of the French school of abstract painting following World War II. More specifically, his work is part of the lyrical abstraction movement, which includes artists such as Michelle Desterac, François-Charles Bazelaire, and Pierre Célice. His work is regularly exhibited, both in public spaces and in galleries, in three or four solo exhibitions per year--both in France and abroad--as well as in group exhibitions and at international art fairs (more than 165 since 1970). Thibaut de Reimpré occupies a unique place within the abstract expressionist movement. His painting is both elegant and powerful; it invites us to surrender to the simple pleasure of the painting, to follow its meandering lines, textures, and colors with the full engagement of body and imagination. It inspires active reverie, instills energy and enthusiasm, and rekindles our passion for life.
