

St. Louis XV-style Coffee Table That Doubles As A Writing Desk, Made Of Violetwood Marquetry, S

680 EUR

Period : 19th century

Condition : Très bon état

Material : Wood marquetry

Length : 74cm

Width : 43cm

Height : 72cm

Description

An elegant late 19th-century period coffee table that doubles as a writing desk, remarkable for its exquisite craftsmanship and its inlaid decoration of satin-finished violetwood, mahogany, and rosewood, forming a sunburst motif bordered by scrolls. Resting on a curved base typical of the Louis XV style, this versatile piece stands out for its exceptional functionality: it conceals beneath its tabletop a sliding pull-out tray lined with leather as a writing surface, as well as a compartmentalized side drawer featuring a bronze pull and its original key. In very good condition with a beautiful patina of age, this refined side table combines the elegance of fine, precious woods with the charm of a masterfully crafted piece of great practicality. Late 19th-century Parisian piece in the style of Jean-François

Dealer

Eleousa gallery

Antiquités

Mobile : 0749880239

4 place de la croix

Ouroux-sur-Saône 71370

Oeben, in fine conditionJean-François Oeben (1721 - January 21, 1763) was one of the most famous cabinetmakers of the 18th century.Delivery in France: EUR50