Description

Important circular period side table from the Restoration period, circa 1820-1835, made of solid walnut and walnut veneer, topped with a thick gray marble slab containing fossils. This pedestal table rests on an elegant turned central shaft, adorned with a fluted bulge, which sits on a wide molded base. The piece rests on an imposing tripod base with concave sides, ending in three rounded legs. The wide circular band, veneered in walnut, displays beautiful color variations and warm grain patterns. The particularly decorative gray marble top is enlivened by numerous dark gray fossil inclusions. It is accented by a thin, engraved circular groove near its edge. A generously proportioned pedestal table, characteristic of French furniture from the first half of the 19th century, suitable for a living
