Description

18-karat yellow gold solitaire ring, set with a 1.1 cm round citrine. Do you love warm colors that catch the light? This citrine displays a golden yellow that shifts to a deep orange, with cognac-colored highlights near the edges. This is the most sought-after shade for a citrine, similar to "Madeira," and far more desirable than a pale lemon yellow. Round, faceted, and beautifully transparent, the stone clearly reveals the facets of its culet. It is set with eight prongs on a slim, sleek band, in the style of vintage rings from the 1960s to the 1980s. The high setting showcases the stone and gives this ring the look of a colorful engagement ring. The 18-karat yellow gold, with its warm, uniform tone, complements the citrine's color. Its name comes from the Latin citrus, meaning "lemon," from which it takes its color.

This deeper shade is more reminiscent of the golden light of an autumn sun. Along with topaz, citrine is the birthstone for November. I think a solitaire in this color is a beautiful way to wear autumn on your finger.
