Description

A ring by Dinh Van, crafted from 925/°° sterling silver (hallmarked with a swan), whose architectural design perfectly captures the creative and avant-garde spirit of French jeweler Jean Dinh Van.Designed as a wide band with generous proportions, this ring stands out for its particularly bold geometric construction, evoking a pyramidal dome with softened lines. ornamentation.With its clean design, structured lines, and balanced proportions, this ring asserts a decidedly unisex character, lending itself just as naturally to men as to women--particularly due to its volume, which evokes a signet ring.This pursuit of formal purity is characteristic of Jean Dinh Van's work. Since founding his own house in 1965, he has developed an innovative approach to jewelry, emphasizing essential forms, clean lines, and the intrinsic beauty of the metal.A true miniature architectural object to be worn on the finger, this ring exemplifies a decidedly modern conception of jewelry, in which the material and construction become the sole decorative elements.A distinctive, timeless, and unisex creation whose aesthetic power lies in the balance of its proportions and the masterful simplicity of its design.Gross weight: 9.77 gFinger circumference: 54--resizing options available upon consultation with our workshop (current diameter 1,73 cm / US size 7)Condition: This ring shows some natural signs of oxidation, characteristic of silver, as well as slight signs of wear.
