Description

An elegant display tondo showcasing a collection of antique 19th-century lace, delicately arranged in a particularly refined geometric and ornamental composition. The piece consists of various elements of machine-made and/or bobbin lace, featuring floral, foliage, and rocaïlle motifs, forming a circular rosette centered by an openwork medallion. The lace, ivory in color and slightly weathered by time, stands out against a soft green silk or fabric background that accentuates the fineness of the workmanship and the decorative richness of the piece. The composition evokes the ceremonial pieces created in the late 19th century for framing and displaying precious fragments of antique lace. The piece is mounted under glass in a circular frame with a delicate beaded silver mold, bearing the crab
