Description

A beautiful Orientalist painting of Africa, depicting a Cameroonian village and its traditional dwellings with conical roofs. Oil on canvas signed by Christian Couillaud (1904-1964), painted in the 1940s-1950s. A luminous composition in shades of red ochre, green, and blue, reflecting a sensitive perspective on the landscapes and architecture of Africa. The scene depicts a Cameroonian village consisting of huts with red earthen walls and tall, conical thatched roofs. Two figures bring the composition to life and provide a sense of scale for this architectural ensemble, while lush vegetation stands out against a clear, cloudy sky. The artist favors a warm color palette, dominated by red earth tones and ochres, contrasting with the greens of the vegetation and the blues of the sky.
