Description

An impressive and elegant Regency-style mantelpiece made of solid oak, dating from the 19th century.This mantelpiece features a richly carved façade, characteristic of the decorative repertoire of the Regency period, a transitional period between the Louis XIV and Louis XV styles.The upper band is adorned, at its center, with an imposing composition of acanthus leaves and deeply carved volutes, forming a particularly decorative symmetrical motif. On either side, the decoration continues with foliage scrolls, small flowers in relief, and an elegant background engraved with a lattice pattern.The slightly rounded vertical posts are embellished with carved floral and foliage motifs, while the side panels feature large molded panels with a scalloped upper crossbar.The entire piece is
