Description

Two light oak armchairs by René-Jean Caillette, stripped of their original finish and prepared for a new finish, produced in the late 1940s.The seats have retained their traditional vegetable-based horsehair upholstery, as well as their system of slats and springs. Only the straps have been replaced. We chose to preserve this original construction, whose flexibility and response to body weight differ significantly from those of contemporary foams.By clicking on this secure link, discover more photos as well as a complete description of this pair of René-Jean Caillette armchairs, stripped down to their bare frames.Sold as a pair and finished in white, these armchairs can be reupholstered in the fabric of your choice by our upholstery workshop.The woodwork has been restored in our workshopH
