Description

A marble plaque carved in high relief depicting a three-quarter view of Christ's bust in its original frame. Northern Italy, 18th century.The work is fully in keeping with the rich tradition of sacred sculpture in 18th-century Northern Italy, characterized by intense devotional expressiveness and a style still rooted in the conventions of the mature Baroque and Rococo periods.The Savior is portrayed with classic iconographic features: long, wavy hair, rendered with full, sinuous locks framing the face, and a short, finely carved beard. His gaze, directed to the side, lends dynamism to the composition, while his slightly parted lips accentuate the dramatic intensity and pathos of the work. The tunic is characterized by soft, deep drapery that wraps around the shoulders and crosses over the
