Description

Fruit bowl or jam jar with lid, complete with its frame, made of colorless blown glass accented with a gold border. Shaped like a peach, it was certainly intended to hold a compote or jam made from that fruit.The body, with wide sides, rests on a small foot; the lid, featuring a twisted ring handle, is cut out at the back to allow the handle of a spoon to pass through; the underside of the lid is carved with egg-and-dart and sunburst rosette motifs.A piece from the Louis XVI period, late 18th century.Satisfactory condition for this antique glassware. It should be noted, however, that there are a few chips and smallcracks that could be concealed by a touch-up of the gilding (mainly at the tip of the rim and two centimeters to the left of the tip of the body). Wear on the gilding.With its unusual and very attractive
