Description

Female figures accompanied by a child in the garden of a pavilion. At the centre of the composition is a Chinese inscription that can be translated as: "Noble and fragrant flowers are worthy of our friendship."Through the symbolism of flowers, this poetic expression evokes virtue, nobility of spirit, and friendship.Large painting under glass, circa 1830-1850, painted in a studio--likely in Guangdong--for the European market. The carved wooden frame is typical of this type of painting, as is the wooden plank backing. A visible gap in the upper right corner. Dimensions with frame: 56x79 cm
