Description

An elegant 18th-century Fratino console table, characterized by a striking contoured top and a particularly refined supporting structure. The piece is supported by lyre-shaped legs, finely contoured and carved, with the same decorative motif repeated in the connecting brackets.The legs feature a flowing, sinuous design, enriched by carved elements that give the console table a refined appearance and a striking presence. The top, with its soft, contoured lines, harmoniously complements the structure.
