Description

Description :An elegant 19th-century French hammered copper fish poacher, complete with its lid and removable draining insert. Its elongated silhouette and softly rounded ends emphasise the warm tones of the copper, while the textured surface catches the light beautifully. Two substantial dark metal side handles, secured with copper rivets, provide a refined contrast to the lustrous body. The fitted lid follows the same understated lines and features a matching central handle. The tinned interior is notably clean and well preserved, retaining its perforated draining insert with two upright lifting handles. A paper manufacturing label remains inside the vessel, identifying its French origin, solid pure copper construction and hand-applied tinning in the traditional manner of coppersmiths. Originally intended for preparing whole fish, this piece also has a strong decorative presence. Its generous proportions and simple, balanced design make it an attractive addition to a country kitchen, a dresser or a thoughtfully arranged collection of antique copper cookware. Displayed with its lid in place, it offers a sculptural silhouette; shown open, it reveals the contrasting silvery interior and fitted insert. Light scratches and small surface marks add texture to the metal without diminishing the elegance of the ensemble. A beautifully understated piece evoking the enduring appeal of French culinary tradition. Dimensions: H. 18.5 cm (7.28 in) W. 68 cm (26.77 in) D. 18.5 cm (7.28 in)
