Description

- Oil on canvas. Original canvas. Hand-signed and dated.- Provenance: Sammer Gallery, Marbella.- In this painting, with its impersonal atmosphere and latent surrealism--where the wind, that invisible force, materializes as the rhythmic rustling of a vast sea of dark grasses--Dino Masiero Sauber reveals himself as a unique interpreter of the Argentine jungle. His dense, almost tactile brushwork shapes a landscape situated at the boundary between two worlds: on the one hand, the edge of a dense, dark, almost menacing forest evokes the dreamlike and somber calm of Arnold Böcklin's cypresses; on the other hand, the technical precision applied to even the smallest blade of grass and the composition with its vast horizons bring him closer to the dreamlike and deeply conscious ecology of the Cuban artist Tomás Sánchez. Masiero Sauber does not merely depict geography; he interprets the hidden psychology of vegetation. Here, the movement of the grasses is not merely a climatic phenomenon, but a vital murmur, a pulsation of the earth that demands attention and respect, amid a stillness as unsettling as it is magnificent.- Dimensions of the artwork without frame: 78 x 59 cm / 91 x 72 cm with an exclusive, custom-made frame.
