Description

Elegant Imperial Russian silver teapot, crafted by the silversmith Jakob Wiberg in Moscow in 1848.Bearing the assay mark of Andrey Kovalsky, this authentic piece beautifully exemplifies the late Biedermeier style prevalent in Imperial Russia during the mid-19th century.The teapot features a gilded interior and refined gadrooned decoration, complemented by applied cartouches on opposite sides. A delicate chain connects the lid to the spout. The lid's finial and handle feature ivory insulating rings, adding elegance and functionality to the design.The piece bears hallmarks underneath, on the foot ring, on the spout, and on the inside of the lid.Origin: Moscow, Russian EmpireDate: 1848Maker: Jakob Wiberg (WIBERG)Assayer: Andrey Kovalsky (?.? over 1848)Material: Solid Silver
