Titled "Le Preux" and signed on its base, thisbronze statue was produced in the early 20th century. Evoking, most the Crusades of the Middle Ages, the sculptor depicts an armed knight bearing the emblems of the Order of the Templars. In very good overall condition, the polychrome patina is original (shades of brown, silver, and antique gold). The hands and face are sculpted. Asimilar model is featured in Bryan Catley's Art Deco catalog. This statue is available for sale only in France and in countries of the European Community. Maurice Favre (or Maurice Constant), trained at theJulian around 1890 and was a member of the Artistes Français; he exhibited at theSalon from 1896 to 1914. Some of his sculptures can be seen in national buildings ("Anatole France" at the Comédie
