Description

Art Deco ring in 14-karat gold, adorned with 14 rose-cut diamonds set in silver and a synthetic blue sapphire.Synthetic sapphire:The term "synthetic" means that the stone was produced in a laboratory. Its chemical composition (Al2O3) and crystal structure are identical to those of natural sapphire, and its fundamental physical properties are virtually the same.Sapphire is a variety of corundum that can occur in many colors besides blue. Its color can be caused by various trace elements, such as iron and titanium, as well as other coloring elements.The difference between a natural sapphire and a synthetic sapphire lies primarily in their origin and how they are formed. A synthetic sapphire is a genuine sapphire--not an imitation--but it is manufactured in a laboratory.Material: 14-karat goldStones:
