Description

A charming 19th-century Venetian landscape, painted in oil on canvas, depicting an elegant square animated by figures in period costume and dominated by a characteristic, slender bell tower. The composition captures the timeless atmosphere of historic Venice with great perspectival balance and a refined sensitivity to light.The very slender bell tower and the square with the wells could correspond to Campo Sant'Angelo or to another Venetian "campo" depicted by a painter of the school of Canaletto or Francesco Guardi. However, it does not appear to be a very famous view that can be easily identified with certainty from this image alone.The work stands out for its attention to architectural detail, the warm rendering of colors, and the delicate liveliness of the small figures
