Description

An important engraving of the Palais du Trocadéro in Paris during the 1878 World's Fair.This elevation of the facade is based on a drawing by Mr. Hubert Clerget, which in turn was based on a watercolor by Messrs. Davioud and Bourdais, the monument's architects.The Palais du Trocadéro was built on Chaillot Hill (16th arrondissement of Paris) for the 1878 World's Fair. A competition to design a large venue for meetings and events was launched in 1876 and won by architects Gabriel Davioud (1824-1881) and Jules Bourdais (1835-1915). Its eclectic style draws inspiration from Moorish and Neo-Byzantine architecture.It was not intended to outlast the event, but it ultimately stood until 1935, when it was dismantled.This engraving on paper is presented in a later frame.Dimensions
