Description

A beautiful painting by Georges Charles Robin depicting Notre-Dame de Paris under the snow, as seen from the banks of the Seine. The cathedral dominates the winter scene, accompanied by boats and views of the Parisian quays.A particularly interesting depiction of the Parisian landscape and Notre-Dame as it appeared before the tragic fire of April 15, 2019.Here, the artist captures a gentle winter atmosphere, using a delicate color palette and a painterly style characteristic of his landscapes.About the artist:Georges Charles Robin (1903-2003) was a French landscape painter and a student of Paul-Michel Dupuy. He exhibited at the Salon des Artistes Français and developed a body of work devoted primarily to river landscapes, villages, and picturesque views
