Description

An intense carved and polychrome wooden sculpture depicting Ecce Homo, a work from the 18th-century Neapolitan school.Particularly captivating is the facial expression, characterized by a downcast gaze and a gentle tilt of the head, which lend the figure a profound sense of emotional engagement. The quality of the carving is evident in the refined detailing of the hair and beard and in the soft, anatomical rendering of the torso.The original polychrome paint, still largely preserved, helps to highlight the strong realism and devotional sensibility typical of 18th-century Neapolitan art.Carved and polychromed woodNaples, 18th centuryHeight: 50 cm
