Description

A late 19th-century French-made side table of Japanese inspiration that was used in verandas or small winter parlors. A lacquered panel decorated with birds and branches, separated by babou wood slats, and surrounded by a double row of bamboo, forms the frame that encases Below, the double legs, also made of bamboo, serve as the base, connected by crossbars at the top and bottom. Usually, the lower shelf is another lacquer panel, but for this rarer model, a composition of curved and straight bamboo spokes forms
