Description

A very beautiful armchair, or armchair, made of carved and molded walnut from the late 16th or early 17th century, originating from the Tuscany region of Italy.It rests on four square-section legs connected by two scalloped crossbars.The two front legs are joined by a wide central crossbar that is cut out, openwork, and carved.The two rear legs are also connected by a nearly identical crossbar, but without carving.The two side rails, as well as the front rail beneath the seat, are scalloped.The wooden seat has been upholstered in red fabric and features a finish with gilded nails.The armrests are wide, flat, slightly curved, and end in a very slight scroll.The rear posts of the backrest are straight with a slight slope and terminate at the top with a palmette and a scroll. They are connected by two carved and sculpted
