Description

Spectacular single-flower vase made of clear blown glass, designed by the renowned Czech architect and designer Borek Sípek (1949-2016) and produced by the Italian company Driade, Driade Kosmo collection.This elegant creation stands out for its particularly slender silhouette, combining a wide conical base with a long, twisted body that gradually flares out toward an asymmetrical opening.The glasswork reveals a remarkable interplay of twists, ribs, and helical reliefs that capture and diffuse light, creating subtle effects of transparency and movement.The composition rests on a transparent conical base, topped by a circular glass ring that ensures a harmonious transition to the central body. The latter features a particularly intricate spiral design, characteristic of Borek Sípek's formal
