Description

Originating from the Lake Van region in the far east of Anatolia, this kilim is distinguished by a composition of horizontal bands, in which very different geometric motifs alternate with more subdued areas of color. The diamonds, crosses, and stylized shapes create a steady rhythm without ever giving the impression of mechanical repetition. The reds, deep blues, muted greens, and ivory backgrounds complement each other perfectly. The bright pink hue alone creates a sense of depth on the kilim's surface. The composition is highly structured, yet also leaves ample room for the weaver's creativity.The piece is woven from wool on wool. The hand-spun wool is visible in the fringes, displaying the "salt-and-pepper" appearance so common in Kurdish weavings from eastern Anatolia.Kilim
