Description

A sculptural console table attributed to John Kennedy, consisting of two slender figures in dark brown-patinated bronze holding a thick, rectangular beveled glass top directly in their hands. Two iron crossbars connect the figures and emphasize the piece's lines.The slender, streamlined silhouettes evoke the world of Alberto and Diego Giacometti. The contrast between the sculptural presence of the bronze and the transparency of the glass gives this console table a unique elegance, straddling the line between sculpture and furniture. A piece with character for an entryway, a living room, or behind a sofa.Period: late 20th century, circa 1990.Attribution: John Kennedy, unsigned.Materials: patinated bronze figures, iron crossbars, and beveled glass top.Shipping costs
