Description

Small Roman glass vase with a fluted spherical body - 3rd-4th century A.D. archaeologyA charming small Roman vase made of green blown glass, featuring a lovely spherical body adorned with vertical fluting, topped by a short tubular neck ending in a rimmed lip.Dating from the 3rd-4th centuries AD, this delicate antique piece captivates with the elegance of its silhouette and the originality of its relatively uncommon shape. Its particularly small size--only 4.5 cm tall--gives it a unique charm.The glass has a beautiful exterior luster and retains all its original freshness. The interior has not been cleaned and still contains some blackish residue, a testament to its age.A very beautiful collector's item--refined and endearing--whose small size and lovely spherical shape make it a particularly
