Description

A detailed 19th-century alabaster sculpture depicting two playful children returning from the grape harvest. The two figures are dressed in rustic costumes, wearing charming traditional caps, and joyfully carry baskets and bunches of ripe grapes. This work exudes all the charm and idyllic atmosphere of late 19th-century European sculpture.The sculpture is crafted from fine, light-colored, translucent alabaster, offering a magnificent diffusion of light as well as a soft and warm texture. The dynamic composition, in which the children move gracefully across a natural rocky base, along with the expressiveness of their faces, attests to remarkable artisanal skill.The piece rests on an elegant circular base of veined marble, featuring warm, earthy tones accented by delicate pinkish hues.
