Description

An elegant bowl made of turned olive wood, consisting of a wide-open circular basin resting on a curved stem and a square base. The balance between the bowl's rounded shape, the narrowing of the stem, and the simplicity of the base gives it a harmonious, classically inspired silhouette.The wood features particularly expressive grain: broad, dark brown--almost black--lines run across a background of warm honey and golden brown hues. These sinuous patterns create a natural design reminiscent of marble veins, visible both inside the basin and on its sides, the stem, and the base.The rim is accentuated by a fine molding, while a circular step marks the underside of the basin. The pedestal, tapering at its center, flares out at the top and base. These turned details complement the richness of the wood without overburdening the form.The softly satin-finished surface highlights the contrasts in the grain and the depth of the hues. This small bowl thus combines the appeal of an antique turned wooden object, or "treen," with the decorative qualities of a wood species with a remarkable grain pattern.Condition: patina and signs of use; small surface marks and fine cracks visible on the bowl and the base. A few light marks under the base. See the photographs for details on the condition.Period: 19th century.Material: olive wood.Height: 9.5 cm.Diameter of the bowl: 11 cm.
