Description

A pair of elegant, neoclassical-style vases made of two-tone alabaster (plain white alabaster and alabaster with attractive contrasting veins). These beautifully crafted vases most likely originate from the Volterra region of Italy--where alabaster work has been renowned since Etruscan times--and date from the mid-19th century.Resting on a square, stepped base, a circular pedestal supports the body of the vase, which features a rich decoration of acanthus leaves and flowers; the ensemble is topped by a wide neck with double rims...In generally good condition, with a small chip at one corner of the base (see second-to-last photo) and a few very slight losses of material that do not affect the overall appearance of the pieces.Quite rare to find as a pair, with beautiful proportions and
