Description

Antique Chinese porcelain longevity soup bowl from the late 19th-century Qing DynastyA creation born of the artisanal skills of Chinese porcelain-making, this deep plate originates from China in the late 19th century during the Qing Dynasty, specifically the Guangxu period.The entire bowl is glazed except for its base, which reveals its raw clay, and it is carefully hand-painted with blueglazed geometric patterns, featuring in the center the Chinese character "shou" (symbolizing longevity)Although beautiful, this plate (or deep dish) can be used as a serving dish for those who appreciate Asian art in their table settings, or it can remain purely decorative--for a collection--placed flat on a table or displayed on a beautiful stand on a dedicated shelf or dresser. Perfect for any lover of antique
