Description

I would like to thank Mr. Antoine Turbat, a member of the Ceramics Study Association, who introduced me to this earthenware production center in northern France, Aire-sur-la-Lys, where this pair of plates from the 1760-1780 period originated.This town in the County of Artois had been producing pottery since the Middle Ages, but the 18th century marked a period of growth, with many workshops producing high-fired earthenware featuring high-quality decorations similar to those from Saint-Omer or Rouen. These two plates feature elegant shapes and a lovely floral design. On the back, each bears a different mark. One has a slight chip (photo) but is otherwise in good condition, with no chipping. The other is in perfect condition.
