Description

Antique inkwell from the Empire period.Beautifully carved; the drapery on the statuette and the Empire-style stool is particularly noteworthy.Once again, a fairly rare collector's item.The figure is seated on a stool and holds a gilded bronze writing tablet in one hand.Perhaps a stylus is missing from the other hand, though this is not certain.The base, which serves as a lid for the inkwell itself, is made of Siena marble with a few minor scratches from use.Finally, for the sake of completeness, the antique glass inkwell may have been replaced.
