Description

Welcome to La Trésorerie.An elegant brass dancer, attributed to the Werkstätte Hagenauer Wien, likely depicting the famous dancer Josephine Baker.The highly stylized figure features a gracefully curved body, long legs in a sweeping walking posture, and raised arms. The face is reduced to a smooth oval, while a few lines outline the hair. Together, these elements create a particularly expressive silhouette, characteristic of Art Deco.This is the small version, with the brass figure measuring 22.2 cm in height. The bracelet encircling the raised forearm is a separate, movable element that was not cast as part of the figure. The figure rests on a rectangular black glass base, likely dating from 1935-1940. This base replaces the original brass part. The original base always had the Hagenauer
