Description

Elegant, lost-wax cast and modeled bronze sculpture depicting a woman in the pose of a "bather," shown nude and seated on a rock. She covers her breasts with her left arm, while her gaze is turned away from the viewer. The realistic features and stylistic execution evoke the characteristic traits of the Art Nouveau (Liberty) style. The signature of the renowned artist Alceo Dossena (1878-1937), who was active in Rome, appears on the lower back. This sculpture, marked by great taste and refinement, adds a touch of class and a sense of antiquity to any setting. Italian craftsmanship, late 19th to early 20th century.
