Description

Pair of large Model 468 wall sconces, designed by Salvi and produced by Reggiani in Italy in the 1970s.Each sconce takes the form of a square panel made of polished stainless steel, composed of intertwined metal strips and five curved elements that house the light sources.The geometric composition plays on the alternation of flat and curved surfaces, whose mirror finish multiplies reflections and light effects. A sculptural light fixture characteristic of Italian design trends of the 1970s.Manufacturer: Reggiani, Italy, circa 1970.
