Description

The Gambadilegno armchair, designed by Enzo Mari for Driade in 1977, is shown here in the version with a headrest and accompanied by its matching footrest.Its turned beechwood frame features wide cylindrical legs with rounded ends, left exposed around generously padded cushions covered in white fabric. The headrest extends the backrest and enhances the comfort of this version, while the footrest follows the same design principle.With Gambadilegno, Enzo Mari combines a deliberately visible wooden frame with soft, enveloping forms, creating a contrast between the simplicity of the construction and the comfort of the seat.Footrest: 45 x 90 x 95 cmManufacturer: Driade, Italy, circa 1977.
