Description

A low sideboard made of solid wood in the tradition of Swiss folk art, crafted in the mid-20th century.Its rustic design features two doors with wooden latches and two upper drawers. The carved posts, hand-crafted handles, and exposed joints are a testament to the craftsmanship involved, where each element retains its unique character.The deep, weathered dark brown finish reveals the wood's grain, its irregularities, and the marks of time. The imperfect surfaces, solid forms, and simplicity of the construction give this piece a sculptural presence, reminiscent of the wabi-sabi aesthetic, where beauty lies in the material and its imperfections.Switzerland, circa 1950
