Description

An elegant 19th-century English bar cabinet, made of mahogany and brass in the George III style, featuring a unique octagonal shape.This piece of furniture, also known as a cellarette or English wine cabinet, is designed for storing bottles and bar accessories. It features a chamfered mahogany body, accented by wide brass bands adorned with circular raised knobs, elegantly highlighting its geometric silhouette. The upper section is topped by a hinged octagonal lid that opens to reveal a spacious interior compartment made of wood, accented with brass trim. The lower section is accented by a carved band with fluted decoration and rests on straight, grooved legs adorned with scroll-shaped brackets. The piece as a whole echoes the decorative style of English George III-era
