Description

Shaped like a baluster, this lovely almond-green opaline vase is marked "Cristal Sèvres France" on the bottom. On its gold-trimmed rim, there is a slight, insignificant chip that can be felt to the touch. It's worth noting that this is more common than one might think with opaline glass, as its production is much more complex than that of regular glass and requires more sophisticated technical expertise; thus, when manufacturing defects were minor, such details were often overlooked. This vase dates from the first half of the 20th century. Shipping available in France and internationally; contact me for details
