Description

Large 17th-century Louis XIII-style walnut parlor armchair with cross-shaped armrests, baluster legs, and a sloping backrest. This generously sized piece is upholstered in red velvet adorned with a central braid in large-stitch tapestry; the matching upholstery is studded. This remarkable chair is comfortable and sturdy and comes from a château in the Tarn region; it pairs well with the chair in my next listing due to their similar proportions and upholstery. With a different yet complementary style, this lovely piece has all the qualities needed for a stylish, high-quality decor; it is sturdy, beautiful, and comfortable--a must-see for enthusiasts of historic pieces from the era of the Musketeers...
