Description

Gateleg drop-leaf dining table in figured solid oak, 18th centuryCentre table with two drop leaves, of the so-called "Gateleg" model. Oval top, almost circular in proportion when open. It can be turned into a console or a wall-side serving table when both leaves are lowered along the base.Made entirely of solid oak. The top is composed of wide juxtaposed boards, quarter-sawn to reveal a very pronounced figure (visible medullary rays). Structure assembled with mortise-and-tenon joints and visible wooden pegs. Rustic cabinetmaking, of English origin, dating from the 18th century.Base with baluster-turned legs punctuated by rings and spheres. Four fixed legs form the main structure, joined by a perimeter stretcher of rectangular section. Two hinged legs act as supporting gates (gateleg mechanism) to hold the leaves. The apron is decorated at both ends with an architectural, shaped cut-out.Satisfactory condition. A heavy, stable piece with a sound structure. The leaves open and close smoothly. Traces of restorations from use visible underneath, including added reinforcing blocks and the later replacement of the metal hinges. Wear from time, old patina, small wood chips on the edges and light natural shrinkage splits inherent in the age of the material.Dimensions:o Total length (open): 175 cm (68.9 in)o Total width (open): 148 cm (58.3 in)o Height: 74 cm (29.1 in)o Depth (closed, as a serving table): 55 cm (21.7 in)Safe and secure shipping:o France: EUR 120 (specialized carrier for fragile items)o Europe and the rest of the world: Please contact uso Professional packing; each shipment insured for the full value of the piece.o Authenticity guaranteed; a detailed invoice is provided with every acquisition.o Returns accepted within 14 days of receipt.o Our pieces may be viewed by appointment.o Does this item pique your interest or curiosity?
