Description

DescriptionAn abstract painting on paper composed of broad, sweeping brushstrokes in deep blue, pale blue, crimson, yellow, olive green, black and muted pink. Overlapping bands of colour move diagonally and vertically across the cream-coloured ground, with exposed areas of paper separating the painted forms. The surface combines thin washes, dry-brush marks and thicker passages, revealing variations in texture and opacity. Darker shapes anchor the lower composition, while lighter strokes open up the upper section. Rather than depicting a recognisable subject, the work centres on colour, movement and the physical application of paint. Its gestural handling suggests an affinity with Abstract Expressionism, although no documented connection to a particular movement has been
