Description

BRICKWORKS IN LE HAVRE Original watercolor drawing. In the 19th century, urban and port expansion in Le Havre led to a significant boom in local brick and tile factories. These workshops were mainly located along the coast, particularly in the neighborhoods of Perrey, Bas-Sanvic, and Bléville, where clay and loam were mined for the construction of the city's homes and infrastructure. This peripheral industrial and rural landscape frequently inspired the landscape painters and watercolorists of the time. Dimensions: 12 x 18.5 cm Mounted on heavy paper; dimensions including mount: 20 x 26 Antique drawing in good condition--see photo
