Description

Ruins overlooking a river, a landscape brought to life by Auguste Savary.The ruins of a medieval structure stand atop a small hill bordered by lush greenery, into which two figures are walking for a shaded stroll.At the foot of this hill, five goats rest in the shade while three figures stand by a river.They take the time to watch various types of boats sailing along this winding waterway.In the background, a square tower flanked by ramparts can be seen at the foot of a mist-shrouded mountain range.Auguste Savary (1799-1874) was a French landscape painter active during the Restoration and the July Monarchy.This unassuming artist enrolled at the École des Beaux-Arts in May 1819. He is best known today for his views of rivers and the countryside. He exhibited at the Salon from 1824 to 1841 and in
