Description

A rare ivory and boxwood okimono depicting a fruit and vegetable vendor striding forward as he offers an apple in his right hand and carries a large woven basket at his side, signed Gyokko.The basket contains apples and broad lotus leaves, carefully rendered with particular attention to detail. At his feet is a second, finely woven basket containing aubergines and other vegetables.The smiling face and slightly forward-leaning posture effectively convey the vendor's gesture and sense of movement. At his waist he carries a tobacco pouch secured by a small netsuke in the form of a Hannya mask.Signed Gyokko in relief on a red lacquer tablet beneath the base, together with a seal incised Toshi.Period: Meiji, late 19th century.Dimensions: 20 x 13 x 11 cm.Condition:
