Description

Desk designed by Giancarlo Piretti for Castelli in Italy in the 1970s.This model features a long, rectangular tabletop in light-colored laminate with generously rounded corners, accented by a contrasting black edge. The frame rests on a polished aluminum base consisting of two vertical posts connected by a central crossbar, each extending into a base with flared legs. On the left side, a suspended cabinet in light-colored lacquered metal with curved corners houses two drawers, the upper one of which is lockable. The rectangular black metal handles accentuate the graphic contrast of the piece. The design combines clean lines, functionality, and industrial materials characteristic of 1970s Italian office furniture.Manufacturer: Castelli, Italy, circa 1970
