Description

A set of four Rey-model bar stools, designed by Swiss designer Bruno Rey and produced by Dietiker around 1975.Developed beginning in 1971, the Rey collection stands out for its innovative assembly system, which allows the wooden components to be joined without resorting to traditional fasteners. This technique, combined with a sturdy construction, has contributed to the model's success in public and communal spaces.Made of black-lacquered wood, the stools feature a slightly concave circular seat resting on four straight legs, complemented by a chrome-plated metal footrest ring.Manufacturer: Dietiker, Switzerland, circa 1975.
