Description

A bistro table made by the French manufacturer Baumann in the 1950s.It features a rectangular red Formica tabletop resting on two cylindrical wooden legs. The metal base consists of two arched, ribbed feet connected by a central crossbar.Founded in the Jura region, the Baumann factory was particularly renowned for its production of bentwood furniture for cafés, restaurants, and public institutions. This table reflects the company's exploration of functional and sturdy postwar furniture.Manufacturer: Baumann, France, circa 1950.
